I was five years old when daddy started packin'
         A                                   E      E7
And I stood there by my mamma - As she cried
           A                                E                        Db7
And the next thing that we knew - Some old train came passin' through
        Gb                            B7
And daddy got on board - And we ain't seen him no more

    E             B7                  E
I wonder why trains - make me lonesome
A                                    E         E7
It happens every time that engine moan's some
   A                          E                     Db7
I hear that whistle blow - It makes my heart sink low
          Gb              B7               A    E
And I wonder - why trains make me lonesome

                                       B7                E
It was a cold grey night - When I drove her to the depot
                 A                                  E
There were tears in my eyes and a ticket in her hand
             A                                     E                Db7
And as I stood there by those tracks - I knew she wasn't comein' back
       Gb                              B7
So I turned and walked away - But I still miss her today

This office building looks like central station - Those ink spots look like engine number nine
               Am                                E                Db7
And this couch on which I lay - Supposed to hall my blues away

That ol' pipe - you keep token - Looks like an old cold engine smokin' Doctor

E             B7                  E
I wonder why trains - make me lonesome
A                                     E         E7
It happens every time that engine moan's some
   A                          E                     Db7
I hear that whistle blow - It makes my heart sink low
          Gb              B7                A    E
And I wonder - why trains make me lonesome
        Gb             B7                A     E    B7   E
Yes I wonder why trains make me lonesome
